

ABSTRACT

Windows, including windows for an aircraft. The windows include a shade. The shade has variable light transmissive characteristics. The shade is entrained upon rollers so that it may roll across the lens window. The parts of the shade are nearly opaque and other parts are nearly transparent. The result is a shade that has varying optical density depending upon the position of the hand operated rollers or shade positioning mechanism.

3514245v1